Leaders Appear Before Congressional Committee Urging End of "Intolerable Conditions."

Athens, April 9.—Quick action by the government forces of General Pangalos, president-elect of Greece, has thwarted an attempt by revolutionists to overthrow the Greek government.

An ultimatum by the government to naval officers at Salonika, whose mutiny threatened to become a revolution of wide-spread proportions, resulted in the unconditional surrender of the mutineers at noon Friday.

News of the mutiny of the Salonika's garrison reached Athens early in the morning. While the local Salonika government was reported to fully control the situation, reinforcements were rushed from Athens immediately. Naval vessels under full steam were ordered to proceed to the scene of the mutiny.

President-elect Pangalos has announced that he will bring Colonels Karacostas, Bakiridis and Djavellas, inciters of the Salonika mutiny to Athens for immediate court-martial.

Mutineers Surrounded.

Immediately following the desertion of the garrison at Salonika the mutineers marched to Alatin, a suburb. They were pursued by government forces and quickly surrounded. Local officials took charge of the situation and put extra police forces on duty to prevent further outbreaks which had been threatened.

The Pangalos government wired an ultimatum to the mutineers giving them until noon to surrender unconditionally under threat of an armed attack by the government forces. While there were reports of threatened uprisings in other places, there were no outbreaks reported.

Reports of threatened uprisings have been received in Athens since the election of General Pangalos to the presidency last Sunday.

Opposition Failed to Vote.

While his opponents represented a small minority of the voters of Greece they had openly boasted that they would overthrow the one-time dictator. Pangalos announced upon his election that he would relinquish all dictatorial powers, modeling his government much after that of the republican government of the United States. He was assured the election Sunday because of the refusal of the opposition parties to vote. Those districts voting assured Pangalos that the election of General Pangalos to the presidency last Sunday.

Censorship of news emanating from Greece was indicated by the failure of New York business houses to receive their usual daily messages from the Greek capital Friday. Bankers stated that they had received no messages during the day, although they usually receive several reports from Athens in the transaction of the ordinary day's business.

The mutiny of the mutiny of troops at Salonika were received from Vienna.

SENATE TO HOLD SESSION TODAY

"Lie" Hurlled on House Floor as Personal Remarks Fly Thick and Fast.

After devoting its entire time Friday to discussing whether adjournment sine die should be taken at once or deferred until next Thursday, the house of representatives of the general assembly voted to adjourn sine die Thursday. Following another hour and a half debate on the advisability of holding sessions Friday afternoon and Saturday morning, the house voted at 1:30 o'clock to adjourn until Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

In the meantime, the senate—after one of the longest days' business of the extra session—adjourned to meet again at 10 o'clock this morning, without voting upon the house sine die adjournment resolution.

By its action in adjourning until Monday, the house left the senate only one day to discuss house bills yet to be acted on in the lower body. Any bill which passes the house Monday cannot go through its first and second readings and reach the floor of the senate before Thursday.

The debate in the house Friday on the question of adjournment developed some of the hottest personal clashes in many years and brought about parliamentary tangles unique in the history of the Georgia law-making body.

Three Resolutions.

Three sine die resolutions were put before the house for debate when the session began. One, sponsored by Speaker Neill and a strong group of members, provided for the Thursday adjournment. Its backers pointed to a dozen or more important local and general bills yet on the calendar which, they contended, should be disposed of before the session ends.

Another resolution, introduced by Representative Wilhoit, of Warren, called for immediate sine die adjournment. The third, introduced by Representative Whelchel, of Colquitt, provided for adjournment at noon Friday. The last was automatically decided when debate on the issue was carried past the hour of twelve.

Speaker Neill was bombarded with a series of parliamentary inquiries from the floor, the main issue being whether the Thursday adjournment resolution or the immediate adjournment resolution should be voted on first. He declared that the point raised was one he had never before experienced in parliamentary procedure. The Wilhoit resolution for immediate adjournment, on a roll call, was then defeated 97 to 77.

Second Parliamentary Tangle.

The house immediately plunged into a second tangle of resolutions, requests for unanimous consent and parliamentary inquiries over the question of adjournment.

Cotton Chiefs See Era of Prosperity For Entire South

With more than 400 leading cotton dealers of the south in attendance, the first day's session of the annual convention of the American Cotton Shippers' association came to an end Friday night with a brilliant banquet and dancing.

Eugene R. Black presided as toastmaster, assisted by Frank Inman, president of the association. Brief speeches were delivered by prominent guests of the evening.

Speakers by President Inman and W. L. Clayton, prominent cotton dealer of Houston, Texas, were features of the business session held Friday at the Biltmore hotel.

Speakers at both the business and social sessions sounded optimistic notes in reference to the future of the cotton industry and as to business conditions throughout the south. Committees of the association were busy at the Friday session finishing various resolutions relating to technical details of the cotton trade, which were introduced and ratified at the Friday afternoon meeting. One of the most important resolutions adopted provided for creation of an arbitration board and an appeals board to handle questions arising between the American Cotton Shippers' association and the American Cotton Manufacturers' association.

Inman Urges Advertising.

President Inman, in his address to the association Friday afternoon, predicted an unprecedented era of prosperity for the south, but urged the cotton men to use every effort to promote the development of new markets and discovery of new customers for cotton products.

"Advertising media of the country are crowded with advertising matter for silks, linens, woolsens and other fabrics but hardly an advertisement for cotton goods can be found," Mr. Inman said.

Textile mills of the east, one by one, are moving nearer the source of their raw material, and money is pouring into the south from all quarters for investment in industries and land, according to Mr. Inman.

As a consequence, the extravagance of every kind have crept in and the cost of conducting our business has soared with surprising rapidity," he said. "Because of rivalry and competition, the profit per bale to the cotton merchant is less today than it was 10 years ago. We are not receiving fair compensation for the risks we take and the insurance we give. No other line of business is conducted on such a narrow margin of profit and none is more technical or more highly organized than ours."

Mr. Inman suggested that a campaign be waged with the state and

PERKINS' FATE WILL BE KNOWN DURING TODAY

Case Went to Jury Late Friday Night and Verdict Expected Early Today.

PERKINS DENIES PLOT TO MUTINY

Travis' Testimony as State's Witness and Defendant's Statement Features of Trial.

David A. Perkins, one of a trio of Fulton convicts who escaped in a mutiny in North Side camp on March 8, in which Guard Captain Pat P. Newsome was shot to death, will know his fate during today.

Perkins' trial on a charge of murder went to the jury late Friday night, and after deliberating for one hour and five minutes without reaching a verdict, members were "locked up" for the night and will resume deliberations this morning when court reconvenes at 9 o'clock.

Arguments in the case started early Friday night and concluded shortly after 10 o'clock. Judge G. H. Howard's charge was brief and the case reached the jury shortly before 11 o'clock.

Perkins was indicted jointly for murder with R. L. Travis, Atlanta's "lone bandit," and Raymond Sisson, who was found guilty by a jury in superior court Thursday and sentenced to pay the extreme penalty in the electric chair May 28.

An indictment charging murder will be drawn immediately against Roy Wilson, convict, who according to Travis, also conspired to escape. The bill will be presented to the Fulton county grand jury Tuesday, according to attorneys in the office of the solicitor general.

Travis will go on trial Monday, according to present plans.

Defendant on Stand.

The feature of the trial Friday was the statement of the defendant and the testimony of R. L. Travis, of "lone bandit" fame. Travis turned state's evidence, and it was largely through his testimony that Sisson was convicted.

Perkins' trial got under way at 9 o'clock Friday morning before Judge G. H. Howard in the second criminal division of Fulton superior court. Jurors were selected Thursday afternoon.

On conclusion of presentation of testimony by the state at 2:45 o'clock, Perkins took the stand. Without the slightest show of emotion or nervousness, he took his oath and began his testimony.

Statement of Defendant.

"Gentlemen, the day of the shooting we were working on the far end of North Side drive and at noon that day Sisson and I washed our shovels preparatory to cooking some meat which we had been used to doing at this time," he said. "Barfield, the guard, ordered us to put our shovels down and said we could not roast the meat. We obeyed him immediately. On the way back to camp that afternoon, Barfield asked me why I hadn't shaved. I told him that I had shaved my razor Sunday and that I hadn't got it back. He started to arguing about the razor of the men and reached for his hip pocket and pulled out his gun either to hit me over the head or shoot me. When he did this,

Freedom Won in Jail Break by 16 Convicts

State Penitentiary of Tennessee Is Scene of Daring and Successful Bid for Liberty.

CONVICTS CAPTURE GUARDS OF PRISON

After Locking Them Up, Men Board Nashville Street Car and Rob Motorman and Conductor.

Nashville, Tenn., April 9.—(AP)—Sixteen prisoners escaped from the state penitentiary in West Nashville about 8:15 o'clock tonight by overpowering guards in the east wing, marching them out the front door into the greenhouse, where they were locked up, and then leaving by the front entrance. The east wing is for white prisoners and most of those who escaped were white men.

Once outside the penitentiary, the convicts boarded a West Nashville street car at the end of the line, and robbed the motorman and conductor. The prisoners also robbed the driver of an automobile near the penitentiary gate and some of them escaped in the machine.

City-Wide Search Made.

Every available deputy from the office of Bob Briley, sheriff of Davidson county, was dispatched to points of vantage within the vicinity of the penitentiary. City police also are aiding in the search.

No complete checkup of the prisoners had been made early tonight, as A. A. McCorkle, warden and other officers at the penitentiary were busy dispatching messages to nearby towns.

D. C. Cox was motorman of the street car that was robbed. He said that the prisoners took hats and coats from him and the conductor.

Life Termers Escape.

A. H. Martindale, of Chattanooga, and Jim Whitely, life termers, were among those who escaped. Martindale was a leader in another escape about a year ago.

Others who escaped included Thomas Garrity, John Jordan, Mose Wilcox, James Aldridge, Lee Allen and Lloyd Broth.

Andrews Planning New Nation-Wide Prohibition Drive

SIXTY FACE DEATH ON HUGE ICE FLOE IN NEWFOUNDLAND

Crew of Hunting Steamer Seal at Mercy of Gale Following Explosion Aboard Vessel.

Leaders Appear Before Congressional Committee Urging End of "Intolerable Conditions."

Washington, April 9.—Far from being discouraged by the body blows dealt prohibition at the senate dry hearings, General Lincoln C. Andrews, dry czar, is perfecting plans for inauguration of a new and more drastic drive to make the nation dry.

The new offensive will be nationwide in scope and is scheduled to begin immediately after the enactment of legislation, designed to sharpen the teeth of the national prohibition law, which already has been introduced by dry leaders, or is in process of formulation.

Arousing Public Opinion.

In the opinion of General Andrews, who proved a sensational witness before the senate subcommittee the first of the week, the open hearings will arouse public opinion to action which will result in stricter law enforcement. This will be true, it is believed, whether public opinion works out in action to modify the law so it can be enforced or in voting more money and more stringent regulations to be used in enforcing the present dry laws.

"Prohibition enforcement has not flopped," Mr. Andrews asserted today. "You may quote me on that. My telegraphic reports from administrators all over the country indicate that conditions are improving all the time. One of the best signs is the increased cooperation we are receiving from local government authorities in the enforcement of the law."

Leaders Hold Conference.

General Andrews conferred with Mrs. Mabel Walker Wilebrant in charge of prohibition prosecutions for several hours today on methods of tightening up prohibition enforcement all over the country and especially in New York city.

It was decided to request congress to amend the prohibition law so that in the future prohibition commissioners would be authorized to supervise issuance of permits and to refuse to issue or renew permits for the withholding and distribution of distilled alcohol in cases where the commissioner felt that the renewal permits would interfere with enforcement.

LABOR LEADERS CALL FOR LEGALIZED BEER.

Washington, April 9.—(AP)—Organized labor descended upon the senate prohibition committee today with a demand for legalized beer.

Called to the stand by the wets, who are only half through the presentation of their case, officials of the American Federation of Labor and affiliated organizations declared that 4,000,000 men for whom they spoke, wanted the Volstead act amended so as to end present "intolerable conditions" under statutory prohibition.

Speaking for William Green, president of the federation, William Roberts challenged the dries to join in a movement for a referendum on the subject. He expressed the belief that those who oppose light wines and beer

THREE GUARD UNITS SEEK PERMISSION TO VISIT EUROPE

Washington, April 9.—(AP)—The house foreign relations committee reported a resolution today to authorize three national guard organizations to visit France, England and Belgium next month. The units are the Light Infantry Blues of Richmond, Va., the first and second companies of the governor's foot guard of Connecticut and the Putnam Phalanx, of Hartford, Conn.

Consent of congress is needed before military organizations as such can go abroad.

Brandon Gives $12,500 to Vandy

Gift Announced at Alumni Dinner Opening Campaign for Funds for Expansion of School.

The campaign of Vanderbilt university alumni, Nashville, Tenn., to obtain $4,000,000 for expansion to its college of arts and sciences received an auspicious start in Atlanta Thursday night when announcement was made that Morris Brandon, prominent attorney, had subscribed $12,500.

Dr. Edwin Mims, professor of English at the university, who was honor guest at a dinner tendered by the Atlanta alumni at Capital City club, made the announcement to those who gathered to honor their alma mater. Dr. Mims said Mr. Brandon had been a supporter of the university for years and had tendered officials $10,000, but after consideration he decided to make his contribution $12,500 larger.

This is the third largest gift received in the campaign and Dr. Mims said the institution "pointed with pride to the Atlanta who was so generous in his subscription."

Referring to the recent Emory campaign, Dr. Mims stated that "light-houses have no competition" and praised workers in the expansion program. Institutions of learning are "lighthouses for the youth," he declared, "and universities of the south

Prepares Own Case and Makes Appeal to Florida Pardon Board.

Tallahassee, Fla., April 9.—A frail little woman who prepared her own case, waited her turn among silver-tongued lawyers from all over Florida, and then made a dramatic but convincing appeal to the state pardon board, obtaining for her slayer-husband the first pardon granted by the board at this session here Friday.

She was Mrs. Ben Smith, whose husband was sentenced to seven years' imprisonment for manslaughter in Lafayette county in 1922.

Without the aid of an attorney, Mrs. Smith collected letters from officials, circulated a petition, and gathered evidence to support her application for a pardon.

When she was called to argue her case, her two small children followed her from her seat. Tears were in her eyes as she told the board how her husband was needed to care for his family.

Dean of Actor-Managers Ill Only a Few Days With Pneumonia.

New York, April 9.—(AP)—Henry Miller, dean of American actor-managers, died of pneumonia tonight in a New York hospital. He had been ill only a few days.

Mr. Miller was born in London, February 1, 1880, and made his first stage appearance in Toronto. After his New York debut with the late Adelaide Neilson in "Cymbeline" in 1880, he appeared with such stage celebrities as Mme. Modjeska, Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske, and Margaret Anglin.

He became a star in his own right in 1897 and a manager nine years later.

He is survived by a son.

Brookhart Vote Set for Monday

Senate Agrees To Take Ballot on Election Contest at Five O'Clock Monday.

Washington, April 9.—(AP)—The Iowa senatorial contest will be settled Monday when the senate votes under a unanimous consent agreement reached late today. The agreement called for the limitation of debate after 3 o'clock Monday to 15 minutes for each speaker and a roll call promptly at 5 o'clock.

The vote will decide whether Senator Brookhart, insurgent republican, will retain his seat or be forced to step out in favor of Daniel F. Steck, his democratic opponent at the polls in 1924.

The outcome will have an important bearing on the political situation in Iowa as Senator Brookhart has indicated he will become a candidate in the coming primary against Senator Cummins, republican, who is running for reelection, if he is unseated. If Steck is seated, the democrats plan to wage a bitter fight against the republican nominee in the hope of getting another democratic senator from Iowa, which has not had two democratic senators since statehood.

As the senate was reaching an agreement for a vote Monday the white house sought to quiet rumors that President Coolidge had expressed a preference for Steck over Brookhart, by denying that the president had any opinion on the case.

MACCABEE FESTIVAL WILL CLOSE TONIGHT

The Maccabee spring festival will close tonight on the Highland Avenue show grounds after a school children's matinee this afternoon.

After shows and rides are closed for the night the bright lights of the midway will be dimmed and shows will entrain on Sunday at dawn for Gadsden, where they will exhibit all next week. Robin & Cherry fulfilled all expectations of the Maccabees' committee of arrangements during their return engagement and were the recipients of many congratulations for the general excellence and cleanliness of their various shows and rides, it is said.

Friday night's audience was large and enthusiastic and every show and ride was liberally patronized. From early in the evening until late at night the midway was thronged, the Royal Midget circus, the water circus and beauty pageant, "Wonderland," Kenpfa's model city, "The Frontier Rodeo," circus side show, the jazzier, house of glass, Alabama minstrels and other attractions drawing thousands.

Son of Banker Leaps to Death From Skyscraper

New York, April 9.—(P)—John C. Hilton, young Williams college graduate and son of a banker, plunged headlong to his death from a skyscraper window today after stabbing himself with a pair of shears.

The police were at a loss tonight to discover why he should have ended his life.

As he was dictating a letter in the offices of an advertising firm on the twentieth floor of a building at Madison Avenue and Fortieth street, where he was considered the "life of the office," young Hilton suddenly jumped to his feet, stabbed a long pair of shears repeatedly into his chest, and hurled himself from the window. He landed on a second floor extension and was dead when an ambulance arrived.

The young man was the son of Frank I. Hilton, vice president of the Bank of Manhattan company.

During the past Christmas holidays the engagement of young Hilton and Miss Mary Mixsell, of Bethlehem, Pa., was announced at an elaborate social function given in honor of the couple by Mrs. Hilton. No date had been set for the wedding.

THIEVES GET VALUABLE LOOT DURING FRIDAY

Jewelry valued at more than $1,000, a large quantity of groceries, a saxophone and $76 in cash was the reward reaped by thieves who plundered two automobile agencies, two grocery stores and a number of Atlanta homes before dawn Friday.

The automobile agencies robbed were the E. Maffett Auto company, 387 Whitehall street, and the Hall-Davis Motor company, 579 Whitehall street. Small amounts of cash were stolen in these robberies.

"Someone hid in the showrooms of the Maffett company's place at closing time Thursday night," Detectives E. P. Gillespie and J. J. Cowan, who were assigned to the case, reported to Captain A. J. Holcombe, of the plainclothes department.

Entrance to the Hall-Davis place was gained by breaking a window, detectives reported.

J. E. White, who conducts a grocery at 353 Glenwood avenue, reported the loss of a number of hams, bacon, a quantity of flour and lard and other groceries, and $250 in money.

After twisting two large padlocks from the front door of the grocery store of E. M. Smith & Son, 223 Chapel street, robbers were frightened away by the sounding of the burglar alarm, according to reports filed with Captain James L. Gordon, of the morning watch.

Others reporting losses from robberies Friday were E. L. Sheppard, 75 Cherokee avenue, diamond stick pin; Mrs. H. E. Edwards, 326 Ponce de Leon avenue, gold bracelet; Mrs. K. E. Police are combing the city today to apprehend three young men and two bobbed-haired girls, occupants of a Hudson speedster which Thursday night killed J. O. Dyer, 53, of 1039 Lee street, near his home, according to police reports.

An abandoned speedster only a few blocks away from the scene of the accident was found by police Friday morning. Blood stains were on the radiator. The right side of the radiator was dented slightly near the top, indicating that it was the car which struck Mr. Dyer, said detectives.

COMMISSION VOTES $45,600 TO CHARITY

Appropriations totaling $45,600 per year were voted Friday afternoon to charitable institutions of the county at a meeting of the commission at the Fulton county courthouse.

Last year the appropriations to charitable institutions totaled approximately $75,000 and was paid to the Community Chest in a lump sum. Due to a ruling recently of Judge John D. Humphries of Fulton superior court, payment of the sums to the Community Chest was declared illegal. The commission Friday voted the appropriations to separate and distinct branches of the Chest, thus overcoming legal obstacles.

MRS. EVELYN BENNETT AGAIN ASKS DIVORCE

Chattanooga, Tenn., April 8.—(AP) It has been learned here that Mrs. Evelyn Fariss Bennett, former Pollock beauty and picture actress, wife of R. O. Bennett, Jr., had sworn to a divorce petition and that it will be filed at once. This will be the sixth divorce action in which Mrs. Bennett has figured as petitioner, and the fourth against Bennett. Her first matrimonial venture was with a newspaper man named James, of New York, whom she divorced, later marrying William Gill, New York broker, likewise divorced.

Her first petition against Bennett was filed here while she was in New York, but a reconciliation followed and the suit was withdrawn. A year later the second suit was filed here, Mrs. Bennett charging desertion, drunkenness and failure to provide, and while this case was pending she filed a third in Tampa, Fla. While the Tampa court was entertaining her petition Bennett was arrested in Jacksonville, Fla., on a white slave charge, but his wife hurried to his aid and he was acquitted. However, she continued to prosecute her divorce suit at Tampa and a decree was granted. Returning to Chattanooga the Bennetts were remarried within a week after their being separated.

Mrs. Bennett is the daughter of a local mechanic, while Bennett's father operates a chain of meat markets here.

Orators Chosen From Tech High For April Match

Frank McDonald and Ernest Pritchett won the annual oratorical contest at Tech High literary exercises Friday in the auditorium of the Wesley Memorial church before a packed audience of students and friends. McDonald and Pritchett automatically became representatives of Tech High school in the annual oratorical championship of the southeast at University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn., late in April.

The debating team of McDonald and Lee Mann won over their opponents, Kingsley Weatherly and Joe Shearer. The subject was "Resolved, that the military forces of the United States should be consolidated into a department of national defense with sub-branches of army, navy and air." The affirmative side won.

Ernest Pritchett proved his ability as a debater and won over Herman Eberhart. Pritchett's subject was, "The Teletype Heart," while Eberhart chose "Ladies From Hell" as his subject. William Tulin, Jr., and Lorey Clarke were others who participated with distinction in the declamation contest.

An address by W. O. Cheney, principal of Tech High, opened the exercises. S. M. Hastings, principal of English at Boys' High school, and A. M. Shiffer, attorney.

CARPENTERS ASK WAGE INCREASE TO $1.50 AN HOUR

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)—Following the demand of union plasterers for a five-day week and $14 a day, with heavy bonuses for overtime and work in the suburbs, other union craftsmen gave notice today of demands for money. If the plasterers gain the five-day week, it will automatically apply to other organized trades.

Carpenters have announced they would demand, beginning June 1, a raise from $1.37 1/2 an hour to $1.50 an hour. This will effect 25,000 carpenters.

Millmen, numbering 5,000, are demanding an increase from $1 an hour to $1.25. Bricklayers also have new demands practically the same as the plasterers, $14 a day, about 4 to 5 hours, and they refuse to sign contracts until the plasterers have settled their wage controversy. Union lathers numbering several thousands are demanding the same scale as the plasterers.

G. M. A. CONTESTS WILL BEGIN TODAY TO NAME ORATORS

Williams; sophomore class, A. S. Derby, Clarence Schienbaum and Dan A. Winterbottom; freshman class, William Thornton, Loring Hunt, Clarence Fier and J. J. Roth.

Decision in the matter was reserved. It was understood that a decision will be announced within the next week or so.

McGuirt was killed on the public square of Talbotton on July 5, 1923, during an altercation between him and Dr. Black. During the trial the defense contended that the slaying was accidental, resulting from a knife wound.

EMORY PROFESSOR SPEAKS TO CIVITANS

Professor Mercer Evans, professor of economics at Emory university, was principal speaker Friday at the noon luncheon of the Civitan club at the Ansley hotel. He spoke on "Pre-Armistice Loans" and gave a review of economic conditions in the United States and foreign countries.

British Steamer Lost

St. Johns, N. F., April 9.—(AP)—A report was received today that the British steamer Seal which left here Wednesday for seal hunting in the ice fields, has been blown up by an explosion but that her crew, about 80 men, are safe on the ice.

NAVAL AIR BILL VOTE IS DELAYED

Washington, April 9.—(AP)—A barrage of amendments to the Butler bill for a five-year naval aviation development program today forced the vote on the bill to go over to Monday.

With the exception of minor committee amendments, all attempts at major changes in the measure as reported to the house failed, and it went over until Monday only because of the lateness of the hour, and the possible necessity of two roll calls to obtain a quorum.

Attempts to alter the measure were made near the close of the session with an amendment by Representative Largaudier to provide for a unified air service under the command of William Mitchell, former assistant chief of the army air service, who resigned recently after conviction by a court-martial on charges of insubordination.

So quickly did opposition to this amendment develop that it was ruled out of order before the reading clerk had finished the first sentence. The measure, which would provide for an $85,000,000 five-year program to provide 1,000 airplanes and two dirigibles, each of three times the capacity of the wrecked Shenandoah, was assailed on the floor as precluding any possibility during the five years of obtaining a unified air service. The contention was first made by Representative Blanton, democrat, Texas, and was concurred in by Representative Conner, democrat, Massachusetts, who later withdrew his opposition after Chairman Butler of the naval affairs committee said it would aid, rather than defeat, such unification.

Chairman Butler, author of the bill, received an ovation which lasted several minutes, when Representative Vinson, democrat, Georgia, paid him tribute as due credit for outlining the development program.

Bedell, secretary and treasurer and Tipton R. Snavely, grand councillor of the southern district. Today's meeting will be of a business nature. SLOAN COMPARES REFRIGERAION WITH RADIO, AUTO

Dayton, Ohio, April 9.—(Special.) Speaking here tonight before the tenth annual Delco-Light and Frigidair Sales convention attended by 1,500 men from every state in the union, Alfred P. Sloan, president of General Motors, classed electric refrigeration with the automobile and radio as the three greatest business developments of the age.

Sloan referred to Frigidair as one of the outstanding developments of General Motors and pictured a future for this division comparable with the growth of some of the larger automobile manufacturing divisions in General Motors.

Sloan stated that sales at retail in March were the greatest of any March in the history of General Motors. Business for the first quarter of 1926 was 60 per cent greater than the same period a year ago when the total was $140,000,000.

There was every reason to believe that April would set a new mark both for production and sales. Delco-Light men are holding a two-day session in Dayton, most of them having come here in special trains, three of which came from the Pacific coast and several from the south.

low, or anything, so long as he failed legally to be elected. What ever may be, or may not be, Steck's qualifications, if he is morally fit, and was the choice of the voters in the contested election, he should be given the seat that is now occupied by one not legally elected. It is said that Steck is an able man and a clean man, but the issue hinges upon his election. Senator George has studied the case. He says he was elected. Others of the committee say so—unanimously. Then it is unthinkable that any serious effort should be made to politically juggle him out of what he has legally won.

TOO MUCH COTTON.

In the "Cross Friday of President Frank M. Inman, of the American Cotton Shippers' association, in convention here, the following significant statement was made:

"If the south is to raise another cotton crop the size of this one, new users must be found for its products."

From one of the best informed men in the cotton trades this brief, but prophetic explanation of the present situation ought to carry conviction and deter planters from increasing their acreage this year.

Interpreted, Mr. Inman means to impress the fact that the 1925 crop exceeded the demand, which, under the immutable law of supply and demand, is compelled to precipitate a decline in the prices of spot cotton. On account of the big supply in 1925—the second largest of American production—the carry-over is heavier than normal. This means that the 1926 production in the entire world must be less than in 1925 in order to properly balance the trade. Other countries are increasing cotton production yearly. They are getting more lint to the acre. The obligation of the American producer is to intensify cultivation on smaller acreage—that is, to grow more to the acre, but have less acres under the plow. This will automatically release acreage for food and feed and other money crops.

Only a sentence, but of unmistakable importance and meaning!

OUR PRISON SYSTEM.

Speaking before the Georgia Federation of Women's clubs at Augusta Wednesday, Thomas Mott Osborne, former warden of Sing Sing prison and the most outstanding prison reform leader in the country, declared the Georgia system of prison road camps a disgrace. He is outspoken in advocacy of a system of training prisoners for future usefulness when they are turned loose upon society—that is, vocational training from which the state may also profit.

The convict lease system was abandoned because of its brutality, and of the revolting practice of trafficking in a commercial way in the bodies of convicts. The road camp system is less brutal, more standardized, and more useful to the state, without the commercial element to condemn it. And yet it is not satisfactory by any means.

The states of the union are moving rapidly toward the idea of centralized penitentiaries, with work provided for the convicts that may teach them trades, elevate their morals, impress the obligations of life, and the utility of crime—at the same time maintaining strictly the penalizing features. In other words state penal institutions are more and more being fashioned after the federal penitentiaries.

This is well provided the convicts can be kept profitably employed. Otherwise it is not. Jail idleness is a curse.

There is need for reform in Georgia—and in every state where convict camps, widely scattered, are maintained.

Mighty Good World.

Mighty good world as it's going along—

One day with a sign—

And the next—

Goin' the right way in spite of the wrong.

Mighty good world as it's going along—

With its crosses and its cares;

Despite the dark shadows—

There's light in its tears;

We pass to the future of beautiful years.

And a rainbow of promise—

The tempest still bears.

The Jinx at Work.

The Tifton Gazette tells this tale of trouble—

"The newspaper 'jinx' seems to be stalking abroad in the newspaper offices in South Georgia. Readers of the Gazette will recall that this paper recently happened to the misfortune of having the front page 'jinx' just at press time. The Albany Herald was the victim of a similar catastrophe Tuesday afternoon. There's nothing quite so discouraging to an editor as a sign of his front page on the floor, 'all in a mess,' when it ought to be on the press, and the press printing papers. We know just how The Herald feels."

That would release this heart of mine.

Death Reveals

Suicide Planned

2 Months Ahead

Tallahassee, Fla., April 9.—(AP)—With the finding here early today of a man identified as Dr. George H. Richards, of New York state, details of a suicide by poison carefully planned at least two months ahead, are believed to have been disclosed.

At an inquest conducted today by County Judge W. T. Moore, which a coroner's jury of five men and one woman, including a physician, was presided over, it was revealed that Dr. Richards called upon J. A. Cully, a local undertaker, where the bodies could be found, and requested that he be cremated, and requested that Albert J. Janssen, of the Golden Bank, Golden, Ill., and Charles F. Gellerman, an attorney, be present.

"I am taking this step to protect myself," he testified.

In the dead man's pockets was found a letter, giving further instructions about the disposition of his remains.

JURY TO WITNESS

PLAY ATTACKED

FOR IMMORALITY

Los Angeles, April 9.—(AP)—The court under the Elms played to a court room here today in which the S. R. O. sign would have been appropriate.

Twenty-six members of the cast are on trial on the charge that they took part in an immoral production.

Nine women and three men are on the jury which must listen to the play, word by word and line by line, according to the announcement of defense attorneys.

The defense today, casting about for parallel circumstances in an effort to prove that the play is fundamentally sound, tried to introduce the song of Solomon and then the entire Bible in evidence, but the court ruled otherwise.

A local officer and a state official went through a fine tooth combing at the hands of defense counsel as to the merits and morals of some of Shakespeare's plays.

Ibsen's "A Doll House" was the last work until finally the police officer, Sergeant Sweetman, exclaimed: "Please, gentlemen don't use their mental faculties while on duty."

Just in Passing

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMON.

No one shedding any tears over spilled milk!

The legislative advocates of the present "pay-as-you-don't-go" plan of state highway operations in Georgia temporarily won in the vote Thursday. And that's that!

They were strong enough to prevent the people from having any voice in a just and reasonable proposal to change the system.

They didn't show any weakness in the face of victory. Why should they?

The whole force of organized machine politics was thrown into the fight.

The burden of finding 138 votes in the house to support a change in the present system—or lack of system—was upon the proponents of a state instead of a county unit plan.

Advocates of a state bond issue, based upon motor taxes, to do the state's job coordinately, and in keeping with business principles, rather than to throw the load upon counties that must continue to issue local property bonds to perpetuate a crazy-quilt system, did not have the required 138 votes.

They had 91 members who stood like a phalanx in the face of a terrific political barrage.

The two "machines" in the capital combined their slaughtering power. Believe me they did!

Allocations of new mileage, "projects," "road favors"—everything of a similar nature to subvert and to coerce—was employed in one way or another.

Some members who had been in meetings of the advocates of a state system finally voted for a continuance of the present county plan.

Others who had conscientiously expressed their conviction that the system as operated is fundamentally wrong, voted against any change or against letting the people have any voice.

Talk about band-wagon climbers! Their immediate lights now are with their own consciences.

All of this, however, is water over the wheel.

The advocates of progress stand as heroes on a field of victory, for phenomenal headway was made toward a goal that Georgians will reach in the legislature to be elected in September.

The issue is clear out. It will be met. Time enough for that.

The thing that I can't understand now is, why the temporary victors are not satisfied with this "pay-as-you-don't-go" victory.

Why try to embarrass the "system" that they advocate by a punitive attack on the state highway engineer?

Both Mr. Neel and Mr. Holder, have been—prior to this legislature—advocates of a state issue of highway bonds.

Mr. Neel, who is not in politics, and who is the technical man of the state highway department, could not change his views.

Mr. Holder did.

Why should Mr. Neel be criticized for advocating a system that can save the state millions of dollars in wasteful and extravagant methods that a county unit plan must entail?

If Mr. Neel is to be censured for advocating a state-wide, instead of a county checker-board system, then the chief of the federal road bureau—the state's biggest partner in highway construction

AIR FIELD COMMITTEE ABOLITION RUMORED

A move to abolish the committee appointed by Mayor Walter A. Sims to supervise work of grading and conditioning Candler field, Atlanta's air port, and to place the work under supervision of the park department of the city, will be launched in the parks and playgrounds committee of city council at a meeting slated to be held at 11 o'clock this morning at the city hall, it was learned Friday.

It is understood that the proposition will be "an economy move," and made with the intention of utilizing about a dozen miles recently placed at the disposal of the department by the construction department, and of about eight more which are slated to be transferred from the sanitary department to motorization of this division.

CLOSE OF SESSION SET FOR THURSDAY

of sessions Friday afternoon and this morning. Moving the park department consideration of general bills at these sessions, but met with opposition on the ground that the light attendance might result in some measure being "railroaded" through. Finally, after arguing for an hour and a half, a simple motion to adjourn was carried, providing for reconvening at 10 o'clock Monday morning.

During explanation of votes on the sine die adjournment question, Representative W. R. Jones, of Marietta, chairman of the constitutional amendments committee and a leader of the road and bond advocates, praised the motives which impelled the governor to call an extra session. He said that inasmuch as all the bills which would have meant progress for Georgia had been defeated, he was ready to go home at once but would vote to stay until Thursday in order to treat pending bills fairly. He spoke with regret of the defeat of the outstanding measures proposed before the legislature and referred to "the two-by-four members who have spent most of their time in criticizing the governor."

Representative Flynn, of Spalding, shouted that Mr. Jones should name the members to whom he referred. Representative Jones stated that he had never made a personal attack on any member in a speech throughout his legislative career and refused to do so at the present time, but stated that he would leave it to "the hit dog to howl."

"If the gentleman from Marietta refers to me, he is a dirty mean liar," roared Representative Flynn.

Representative Martin, of Troup, Friday introduced a resolution calling upon the state highway board to discharge Chief Engineer W. R. Neel. The resolution set forth that Engineer Neel has been speaking on behalf of road bonds while all three members of the highway board are opposed to them, and charges him with insubordination. The resolution was referred to the committee on public highways.

The first bill on the calendar for consideration by the house Monday is that of Representative Stark, of Wilkes, which provides for prompt payment of school teachers' salaries by increasing the borrowing power of the governor for this purpose to $3,500,000. The measure is a constitutional amendment, requiring 138 affirmative votes to pass the house.

When the senate meets this morning, its first duty under the head of unfinished business will be to pass

Leaders in Cotton Industry in Session Here

More than 400 cotton shippers are attending the annual meeting at the Biltmore hotel of the American Cotton Shippers' association. The above photograph shows several score visitors just after adjournment of Friday's business session. Members are enjoying many social features between convention sessions, Friday night's affair being an elaborate banquet and dance at the Piedmont Driving Club.

upon the bill to make the A. & M. school at Americus a state normal school. The house resolution for sine die adjournment Thursday will probably come up next as a privileged resolution.

Prior to debate on adjournment resolutions, the house Friday concurred in the senate amendment to the bill authorizing appropriation of money for the support of the veterans' service bureau. The bill appropriates approximately $10,000 for support of the bureau, with the provision in the senate amendment that after two years the office of assistant director, whose salary is $2,400 per year, shall be abolished.

Senate Passes Bills.
Working on its calendar set by the rules committee, the senate Friday passed the house bill to amend the cigar and cigarette tax act in certain technical details regarding enforcement.

A joint resolution, passed earlier by the house, was also passed authorizing presiding officers of both houses, together with the secretary of the senate and clerk of the house, to remain at the capitol five days after sine die adjournment to wind up business of the session.

Opposition developed in the senate to a bill to permit the Georgia Normal school at Statesboro to borrow $45,000, giving a loan deed to the property as security. It was argued by Senator Knight, of the 6th, that the bill was unconstitutional in that it pledged state property to secure the debt. The bill finally passed by a vote of 28 to 15.

During debate on the American school bill, which went over today as unfinished business, Senator Maddox, speaking in support of his own amendment to make normal schools of A. & M. schools, pointed to the necessity of ample institutional facilities for training young women as teachers.

"We need normal schools the year round," he said. "We need a great number of them. Our young women now training for teaching are those and those who have graduated, are marrying by the thousands. I do not object to that. I would not place myself on record as opposed to teachers marrying. I am for it."

At this juncture, Senator de la Perriere, of the 33rd district, interrupted.

"Will the senator tell us why it is he has never married?"

"I will," replied Senator Maddox. "I am of the firm conviction that I've done my duty in endeavoring to terminate my single blessedness, and the only reason I can ascribe for my failure is that the ladies of my district are possessed of far more discretion than those of the senator from the thirty-third."

Election Today.
Election of officers for the ensuing year and selection of a city in which to hold the next annual convention will be chief business transacted at today's session. The final session will adjourn at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon.

Present officers of the association are Frank M. Imman, Atlanta, president; W. J. Neale, vice president; R. C. Dickerson, vice president and secretary; and H. M. Bennett, treasurer. Fred Cockrell, head of the Atlanta Commercial exchange, served as general chairman of the entertainment committee in charge of the convention.

national departments of agriculture for the importation of better staple seed and to stamp out the sale of many short staple varieties that are now being sold.

Discussing objects of the association, Mr. Imman declared its aims are to improve the cotton crop, to establish fair rules and practices, and the national handling of cotton along lines which will prove most beneficial to both producer and consumer.

Mr. Clayton, in his address, discussed a topic of vital interest to members of the association, "The Cotton Futures Contract." He spoke for almost an hour and presented facts and figures in connection with the "manipulation problem" which he had gathered in dealings of his firm, which is one of the largest cotton shipping companies in the world.

Southern Delivery.
One solution of the "manipulation" problem suggested by Mr. Clayton provided for delivery of cotton bought on New York contracts, in the south. Delivery in the south on these contracts was recommended by the federal trades commission and also probably would have approval of the New York cotton exchange, according to Mr. Clayton.

"There is a substantial sentiment on the New York cotton exchange for southern delivery, but we can hardly expect New York to act when the spot cotton trade in the south is unable to agree on the subject," he said.

Experience of years has demonstrated that it is rarely profitable to take cotton to New York in any quantity except to prevent a "squeeze" or "corner," according to Mr. Clayton, who said neither spinners nor exporters wanted cotton concentrated at New York.

"It seems evident to me that the cotton business should not be limited, but its breadth should be enlarged so that any abuser would automatically encounter a weight of economic forces he could not resist," Mr. Clayton said. "This end cannot be reached without discarding the fundamentally wrong principle of contracting for delivery in a place far removed from cotton's natural channels and where cotton never really ought to be concentrated."

Emergency for Situation.
"Out of that reasoning, I am convinced that the only remedy for conditions complained of is southern delivery on New York contracts, forcing the abusive buyer to face the whole crop and an abusive seller to need the whole crop. By southern delivery, I mean exclusive southern delivery without option of delivery to New York. The solution of every commercial problem is dictated by sound economics, and so it will be with this problem."

In the resolution of the futures committee, it was recommended that the bureau of markets of the United States department of agriculture be requested to construe the Smith-Lever bill so as to make enforceable strict low middling spotted cotton and 12 other grades of cotton against future contracts.

The American Cotton Shippers' association is composed of six cotton merchant associations as follows: California-Arizona Cotton association, Southern Cotton Shippers' association, Oklahoma State Cotton exchange, Texas Cotton association, Atlantic Cotton association and the Arkansas Cotton Trade association.

Welcomed by Governor.
When the session opened Friday morning at the Biltmore hotel, visitors were welcomed to Atlanta by Governor Clifford Walker. Mr. Imman delivered the address, and after a short business session, visitors enjoyed a stag lunch at the Biltmore.

Marvin Underwood, Atlanta attorney, presided at the dinner and introduced the prominent visitor.

John Paschal, managing editor of The Atlanta Journal, is head of the local drive, and after the dinner declared the Atlanta quota of $25,000 would be raised within three or four days. Work of soliciting was assigned to the students.

The gift of Mr. Brandon is surpassed only by the $100,000 subscription of Frank C. Rand, president of the International Shoe company, of St. Louis, Mo., and Whiteford R. Cole, president of the Louisville & Nashville railway, who gave $25,000. The 15,000 alumni scattered in 48 states and 28 foreign countries will be urged to cooperate in the campaign for expansion funds.

The college of arts and sciences has had no new classrooms in 20 years and the student body has increased from 300 to 1,100. Dr. Sims said, "Only two buildings, Furman Hall for the chemistry department, and a small structure for the engineering students, have been erected since 1875. The endowment will furnish three new buildings, add necessary laboratory equipment and make it possible to enlarge the faculty and increase salaries of others who have served long years on meager pay, the speaker asserted.

Dr. Sims urged former students to "lead every energy" toward raising respective quotas in order that the school might carry out its expansion program. The aid of local alumni was pledged by several in short talks.

PERKINS TO KNOW HIS FATE TODAY

I put my arm around him. He tried to shoot me with the gun. "He shot the gun two, three or four times—I don't know which—in the struggle which followed. He was on top of me in the bottom of the truck. We got up together and he jumped off of the right side of the truck and I jumped from the left. I ran around to the front of the truck to keep from getting shot. Jumping onto the running board of the truck, I tried to help Travis, who was under the wheel, get the truck under control. It still was running down the hill. I never had my hand on the gun and didn't touch it."

The remainder of his statement was a detail of the flight. When they reached Holly Springs, Perkins said, they discussed the escape and the punishment at camp.

"It was the fear of this punishment that kept us going," he declared.

"I didn't even know that Mr. Newsome was shot or anyone else was hurt until we arrived at the county jail," he said. "I have never mentioned a plot to escape, and when I was questioned about the matter at the jail by Edwin Johnson, Fulton county commissioner, I refused to discuss the matter until I could see my lawyers."

At this point, Perkins seemed to falter and became nervous. He repeated former statements several times, ending his statement by an appeal for mercy on the ground that he "had never had a chance in the world, having been sent to the reformatory and released in 1918."

"I never had the care of a mother," he pleaded.

The state introduced the same witnesses in the Perkins trial as those called against Simon, including, Dr. C. F. Newsome, a physician in a hospital, who treated Captain Newsome; J. P. Barfield, Fulton county convict guard who was an eyewitness to the murder; Guy Ralston, driver of the car in which Captain Newsome was killed; and Mrs. Newsome, widow of the slain man. Dr. Fischer swore to a dying statement of Newsome in which it is alleged Newsome stated that Perkins had a gun in his hand and was firing it.

Rebuttal Begins.
In rebuttal the state recalled Barfield, who repudiated the statement of Perkins in regard to the razor. Captain A. A. Clarke, warden, repudiated the statement by Perkins in regard to alleged food for the prisoners and cruel treatment.

County Commissioner Edwin Johnson testified in rebuttal that Perkins had admitted firing the pistol during the murder.

Rebuttal testimony was concluded at 4:40 o'clock.

Seated at the state's table were Mrs. Newsome, Assistant Solicitor General Ed Stephens, Solicitor General John A. Poykin, Special Investigators George Pounds and Bert Donelson, County Commissioner Edwin Johnson, Captain A. A. Clarke, warden.

At the defense table was seated Perkins, his sister, Mrs. Sarah Fuller, the defendant's father, J. L. Perkins, and his attorneys, Swift Tyler and John P. Hanson. Frank Hooper, Sr., frequently consulted with the defense counsel during the trial of the case.

During the arguments Friday night Mrs. Newsome and her three children sat at the state table and listened attentively to arguments of lawyers.

QUEEN MARY SEWS
FOR ROYAL BABE
EXPECTED SOON

London, April 9.—(P)—Queen Mary personally has made several penicillators or cot covers for the Duchess of York, who is expecting an interesting event some time this spring.

The queen, who sews beautifully and is very fond of doing handwork during odd moments, has worked three pink and blue coverlets crocheted in a scallop pattern and lined with crepe de chine of exactly the same shade. The stitches in the crepe are extremely fine, even and small, while the crocheting is described as exquisitely smooth.

LABOR LEADERS CALL FOR LEGALIZED BEER

realize that a referendum would declare in favor of the modification of the Volstead act.

"If this were not true why do they fight a referendum so strenuously?" he asked.

This question as well as many other contentions raised by the wets will bring answers from the dries when they begin the presentation of their case next week. It appears now that the wets will not conclude before the middle of the week, as they still have eleven hours of time remaining under the agreement reached by the committee.

Five Leaders Testify.
Besides Mr. Roberts, the labor officials testifying today were William J. McSorley, president of the Building Trades union; Andrew Furuseth, president of the International Seamen's union; Jones O'Connell, president of the Ohio State Federation of Labor, and Henry F. Hillers, secretary of the New Jersey State Federation of Labor.

One by one they painted a gloomy picture of the situation under Volstead prohibition, with workmen and others brewing terrible concoctions in their homes in an effort to obtain the beer which it was declared they wanted. Corruption in enforcement in Ohio and other places and a nationwide disregard for the law also were emphasized.

The labor officials were unanimous in the opinion that the legalizing of light wines and beer would remove home brewing and the demand for the stuff bootleggers now peddle as well as make for improvement in general law enforcement conditions.

Reformers Assailed.
Reformers generally came in for sharp assault. Mr. Roberts asserting that the defenders of the Volstead act apparently prefer to see the people "seriously affected by vicious concoctions of liquor rather than make this a temperance country by legalizing the manufacture of light beers."

Mr. Furuseth in scolding "reformers," declared that history had demonstrated that morals could not be legislated into the people, while Mr. Hillers said methods used, such as employing women as "lures," in seeking violators of the dry laws, had brought "the Anti-Saloon League and the Volstead act into disrepute."

Reciting personal observations on the frequent tours of the country they make in connection with their official duties, Roberts and O'Connell declared prohibition was the one topic in which persons of all walks of life are interested and they asserted that the demand for modification of the law was increasing.

Big Wet Movement.
Mr. Roberts declared that "the present uprising of those opposed to the Volstead act is a stable, solid movement," adding: "Give the people a chance to vote on this issue and there is no doubt of the result."

All of the labor officials declared against the return of the saloon. O'Connell and Furuseth particularly emphasize this point, the former saying there had been a general misunderstanding as to organized labor's attitude.

Picturing conditions in New Jersey, Mr. Hillers said that where there used to be "a saloon on every corner as the old saying was," now there is a "brewery or distillery," in every home. He told of communities in which where residents in a block chip in to buy materials and the distiller distributed the finished product.

Another point on which the labor officials appeared to be unanimous was that the present law could not be enforced. They contended that the human appetite for intoxicants would be served and O'Connell declared that the federal government could not bring about real prohibition "no matter how much money you spend nor how many additional laws you pass."

All of the labor officials on hand could not be heard in the two hours allotted today and some of those who did not get on the stand may be called later. Tomorrow the wets will call former officials in Canada to describe the operations of the "Quebec plan" of government control of the manufacture and distribution of liquor.

At the conclusion of the fifth day of the hearings, Senator Edge, republican, New Jersey, issued a formal statement, declaring that the contention the wets had made "that prohibition was unenforceable and thus a failure has been clearly and definitely established."

"If the opposition gets anywhere they must refute these facts and not as in the past defend the law by exhortation or evasion. The country is now too well enlightened and facts alone will be considered."

Some PLAIN Cold FACTS about Avondale Estates

The Marvelous Endowments Exclusive to Its Residents

SO STUPENDOUS was the development program announced two years ago for Avondale Estates that it fairly staggered the imagination. Its ultimate completion was almost beyond belief, so gigantic it was.

But it has been carried out, in every detail. Now Avondale Estates stands as an unparalleled achievement in the annals of southern real estate history. Not only has it been epoch-making here, but has attracted nation-wide attention. Not in California, not in Florida, can its marvelous completeness be surpassed!

Civic engineers and city-planning authorities of international repute declare emphatically that it cannot be equaled anywhere—for scientific planning and thorough-going perfection in providing every requirement for an ideal land of homes. Every promise has been fulfilled, and very much has been done besides.

Beautiful Lake Avondale

A large lake, inviting the swimmer, the fisherman and the boating devotee, was announced in the plans of Avondale. That lake now nestles in its beautiful setting, fringed with tall cedars, rhododendron and juniper. At one end, a green peninsula, clad in majestic trees, juts into the water. There will be a real bathing beach, utilizing an entire trainload of sand in obtaining its perfection. A handsome bathing casino, a bathhouse and a boathouse are scheduled for the year. A beautifully terraced bridge path, 10 feet in width, runs its course completely around the lake.

Incomparably beautiful home sites, terraced and high, rise on either side of the lake—unmatched for perfect homes.

Picturesque Swimming Pool

A swimming pool, surpassing all others in the South in excellence, attractiveness and appointments, was promised. Last season it opened and was marveled at, set like a precious gem in a grove of patriarchal oaks. Spring greenery now adorns its banks and the picturesque English type bathhouse will open again in May for the residents of Avondale.

Avondale Riding Stables

The Avondale Stables are now supplying handsome, well-trained mounts to those who like a canter over the miles and miles of wooded bridle paths that dip over the hills and into the woods beyond. Blooded stock these horses are, cared for with meticulous attention. For the little ones, there are ponies, tractable and gentle. All the equipment is of the finest, from the English saddles to the stalls themselves.

Athletic Fields

The youngest, the growing-up and the grown-up can find their own particular desires for wholesome outdoor life abundantly gratified. Tennis courts, baseball diamonds and every sort of athletic field are right here, always available, always well-run and supervised.

Golf Course

Within easy walking distance is the Forrest Hills Golf Course, in splendid shape and a sporty affair, offering good golf to the Avondale resident every day in the year, fairly placing links in his own front yard. The well-kept greens and fairways are always in the best of condition, for this is a year-round course.

Parks

The entire property is dotted with spacious parks, equipped in the most approved method and holding every possible beauty. The landscape engineers who have planned them have worked to retain as much of their natural beauty as possible, and have emphasized that rather than formality. For the romping youngster, or the quiet walk-and-talk of the elders—Avondale affords ample opportunity.

Children's Playgrounds

The wholesome growth and healthful development of children, in fact, has never, anywhere, been provided for in such thorough-going fashion. The playgrounds of Avondale are the most completely equipped south of Philadelphia—with swings, merry-go-rounds, slides of every conceivable type and size, horizontal and parallel bars, rings, trapezes and even wading pools and sand pits for the tiniest of the tots. It's a veritable children's paradise.

Educational Facilities

The thoughtfulness which has characterized this development from the start has also cared for education, in the modern, up-to-date school that is now in operation, with accommodations for 350 pupils. In addition, Agnes Scott College, one of the country's foremost schools for women, is within ten minutes' ride; Emory University is easily accessible.

A Flourishing Business District

And the more utilitarian side of things: A business district, with stores and shops of every modern type housed in buildings of unusually charming architecture, was announced. Today, the resident of Avondale Estates buys everything the household needs from splendid drug, clothing, grocery and department stores whose up-to-dateness belies their picturesque Old English appearance. Such chain systems as Rogers', the Atlantic and Pacific, Piggly Wiggly and the Standard Oil Company, who choose their locations with scientific exactitude, are numbered among the many establishments already here.

Avondale's Dairy

Thirty blooded Jerseys, of the Avondale Dairy, supply freshest milk and cream to the residents at a great saving in price. A man with years of experience in his profession supervises the dairy, and the milk and cream stand at the top in the tests.

Splendid Vegetable Garden

A large and varied garden, in which the best qualities of every vegetable indigenous to the soil and climate are grown, supplies Avondale residents. The truck delivers these splendid vegetables (not the kind obtainable just anywhere, but the best growable) to your door—and at just what it costs to grow them in wholesale quantities. A remarkable saving!

Orchards and Vineyards

Forty acres of trees and vines supply peaches, grapes and other fruits—all cared for by men with years of successful experience back of them, men whose duty it is to see that those who live in Avondale get the best of everything.

Nurseries

A large nursery grows and tenderly nurtures every conceivable tree, shrub and flower—for beautification of the entire development and for the individual use of Avondale's citizens.

Scores of Beautiful Homes

Scores of handsome homes now stand on these rolling slopes, scores of others are under construction. The architecture and construction has been held unswervingly to the highest standards. Construction has been of a uniform high quality and will always be. The most perfect homes in all the Atlanta region are now at Avondale Estates, equipped with every known metropolitan convenience; abundant pure water and electrical service.

Nine Miles of Streets

The naturally beautiful contours of the property are now traversed by broad paved streets, lined with sidewalks and flowering parkways. The generous roominess of the home sites is further amplified by these splendid thoroughfares that sweep in graceful curves throughout the entire area. There are now nine miles of them; more are being added each day.

Transportation and Accessibility

Avondale Estates, though far removed from the grime and noise of the clattering city, is easily accessible. It is just twenty minutes from Five Points by motor, just thirty by express trolley on the main Stone Mountain line. Avondale Estates, by trolley, is as near the city in minutes as the Druid Hills Golf Club, or many other points well within the city limits!

Here is an opportunity you cannot afford to overlook. You owe it to yourself and your children to see what a wonderland has been created here. Visit it this week-end without fail.

Prices on these splendid home sites are remarkably low and offer rare investment opportunity.

Old Love Story of Cervantes Written Into Charming Opera And Sung by Great Chaliapin

BY BEVERLY BURGESS.

On Tuesday evening of opera week we are to have the old familiar Spanish romance of Cervantes, Don Quixote, all dressed up in a modern opera rewritten by Jules Massenet, the famous French composer, and sung by Chaliapin, the world-renowned bass from Russia.

To the League of Nations enthusiasts no words of urge are here needed! First-hand here you are given an opportunity of studying the highest type representative in the world of art from three of the big world powers.

Really won't this be an interesting occasion? Think of hearing Chaliapin's Russian tongue in the graceful French language and watching his interpretation of a Spanish don! Nothing could be more thrilling!

The New York papers are very enthusiastic over the way he does all of this and no doubt you will be, too, after witnessing this terribly exciting presentation Tuesday evening.

Our Fantastic Old Friend.

In this opera version of Don Quixote we are told that it is an heroic comedy, nevertheless we have little trouble in recognizing our old friend Don, the knight; Sancho Panza, the fat squire and faithful friend, and Don Juan, the hated rival, and the fair Dulcinea—the fanciful beauty.

Massenet remains true to form and gives us the same lanky, country gentleman of La Mancha portrayed just as Cervantes does. We find here the same Castilian honor and chivalry, gentle and dignified character, admired and trusted by friends and dependents and will so completely under the spell of much reading of famous books on chivalry and knight-errantry that he is absolutely obsessed with the thought of becoming a knight himself to go forth into the world to defend the oppressed and avenge the downtrodden like unto the heroes in the romances. He was called "a knight of the woolf countenance," the "wind-mill fighter" and other titles of derision.

Childhood's Favorite.

In Sancho Panza and Dapple—the steed which, with Rosinante, the mount of Quixote, play such important parts in this knight's adventures—we find still other life-long friends. Familiar to all childhood is the humorous clown-character of Sancho Panza, the faithful and devoted companion of Don Quixote's. Through one hair-raising experience after another for many years, Sancho stood by the side of his friend and master, until his death in the Sierra retreat, when with a cry and a sob he embraced and covered the cold body of Quixote. (This is a climax not used by Cervantes in the original story but serves well its purpose in the operatic version.)

The lovable but laughable character of Sancho is to be played in Atlanta opera by Giuseppe de Luna, who is splendid in this role, say those who have seen him very recently in it.

In Don Juan we find the rival for Dulcinea's affections, who "loves and adores this beauty, wayward and enchanting! Angelo Bada, a star in the Metropolitan firmament, takes Juan's part.

The Heroine.

In fair Dulcinea, winsome and faithful we find the heroine.

"Dulcinea is fair as a blossom, but a man should love her no more than a flower that is plucked on a morning in spring, to do more were but folly,"—so says Rodriguez, adviser and friend to Don Quixote.

To the unfortunate Don, Dulcinea says: "Prove thy boast, my transcendental hero, my lion-hearted champion! Wouldn't thou make me happy, go forth then and win back my necklace that yester eve the brigand chief Tenebrun did dare to steal from me!"

Though death be my reward, tomorrow I go forth, well-pleased to show thee this small token of my love!"

And about this adventure focuses much of the action of the opera, which, though the necklace is secured, ends in the death of the broken hearted knight in the mountain fastnesses.

Richness of Atmosphere.

There is a lavish wealth of beauty in the Spanish scenes and settings, crimson auroras, gorgeous sunsets in the Sierras, with mountains faintly

HIGH LIGHTS OF HISTORY

The American Army Disbands. by J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

THE TIME HAD NOW COME TO DISBAND THE CONTINENTAL ARMY.

CONGRESS MEANT TO PAY ITS DEBT TO THE SOLDIERS BUT A REQUEST TO THE STATES FOR THE NEEDED FUNDS BROUGHT BUT LITTLE RESPONSE.

ON APRIL 19, 1783, THE EIGHTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE BATTLE OF LEXINGTON, WASHINGTON ISSUED A PROCLAMATION TO HIS TROOPS, ANNOUNCING THE END OF THE WAR OF THE REVOLUTION.

AFTER 9 YEARS OF SERVICE, THE CONTINENTAL ARMY WAS DISBANDED AND THE WAR-WORN VETERANS SET OUT FOR THE HOMES THEY HAD FOUGHT SO BRAVELY TO DEFEND.—CONGRESS HAD NO MONEY TO PAY THEM AND SENT THEM HOME "WITHOUT A FARTHING IN THEIR POCKETS."

IN THE LATTER PART OF NOVEMBER, 1793, THE BRITISH EVACUATED NEW YORK, WHICH THEY HAD OCCUPIED FOR SEVEN YEARS. AMERICA WAS NOW FREE OF THE INTRUDERS.—MONDAY, WASHINGTON RETURNS TO CIVIL LIFE.

outlined in the distance, windmills viewed through mists, festival scenes with bright music to which the famous Metropolitan corps de ballet dance.

And there is a laugh, a cry and great pleasure awaiting the presentation of this popular old Spanish story on the Metropolitan bill for opera week.

It is a work of incomparable spirit and is said to have been written expressly for Chaliapin.

College Night.

There must be an unprecedented amount of wisdom somewhere in the executive management of the junior league personnel for otherwise who would have had the thought to put on a "college night" for the Follies performance?

One Marcus Tullius Cicero once was known to have made the remark in an address "what is more charming than the enthusiasm of youth?"

Those were remote days—yet this same feeling has come across the centuries to us today.

And what will draw an audience more quickly—saving, of course, the attractions across the footlights—than a beautiful audience of happy young people? To sit in such an atmosphere as this for several hours is worth the price of admission of any one's money.

If there is sight on earth more inspirational than to look into these bright, happy eyes and imbibe the wholesomeness which they unconsciously emit, laugh when they laugh and forget the turmoil and strife of life's existence for the nonce, it certainly yet has to be found.

We shall not miss college night at the Follies if there is any chance to be present. All are welcome.

The boxes are to be filled by the college fraternities and their girls. In the Phi Delta Theta box will

W. L. VENABLE'S BODY TO BE BROUGHT HOME

The body of Walter L. Venable, pioneer Atlantan who died Friday in Cleveland, Ohio, following an operation, will be brought here for funeral and interment Sunday afternoon.

For 20 years Mr. Venable served as deputy clerk of Fulton superior court, entering the office when his father was clerk in 1878. He was 68 years old and enjoyed a wide friendship among members of the Atlanta bar, court officials and citizens in all walks of life.

During the war between the states his father, the late W. R. Venable, saved Fulton county records from hands of federal soldiers by hiding them on his country estate until hostilities ceased.

Mr. Venable was said to be one of the most efficient deputy clerks ever to serve the Fulton courts, and affable and helpful to judges and attorneys.

Dr. Sam Small, who served as official reporter of the courts for 10 years, said of him: "Walter Venable had a lovable disposition, a generous heart and a devotion to his friends that was unusual. His friendships were firm and affectionate."

It was Mr. Venable who administered the attorney's oath to Woodrow Wilson when the future president was admitted to the bar by Judge George Hillier in 1892.

Wilson went to Paris to the peace conference he was considering the appointment of Mr. Venable to an important federal office, it is said and but for the long illness of the president that followed his return from Paris, that appointment would probably have been made.

Mr. Venable offered for election as clerk of the superior court at the last election but withdrew in favor of J. W. Simmons, who was defeated. He was a shining member of North Avenue Presbyterian church, the Y. M. C. A., the Knights of Pythias, the D. O. K. K. and the Lions' club. He resided at 1022 Peachtree street.

Survivors include a sister, Mrs. Frank T. Mason, of Atlanta, and two brothers, Sam H. Venable, of Atlanta, and Clarence Venable, of New York.

Funeral arrangements had not been completed Friday night.

RIVERS AND HARBORS MEASURE IS REPORTED

Washington, April 9.—(AP)—Formal report of the $36,000,000 rivers and harbors omnibus bill was made to the house today with the two chief controversial points still drawing the criticism of a minority of the rivers and harbors committee.

These members who are opposed to the proposed expenditure of $250,000 for a new survey of the all-American canal route across New York state and to water diversion from Lake Michigan as a factor in the Illinois river development have until tomorrow night to file a minority report.

They are Representatives Chalmers of Ohio and Sosnowski of Michigan, republicans Mr. Rooney, democrat, Ohio; and they expect to be aided in their fight by Representative Burton, republican, Ohio.

Opposition to the all-American and the Chicago diversion projects had been carried on chiefly by members who contend great lakes navigation would be injured through a lowering of the lake level and that the St. Lawrence offers the best outlet to the Atlantic.

Syndicate Plans To Make Louisville Bourbon Whisky Center

Louisville, April 9.—(AP)—A movement is underway to make Louisville the world's Bourbon whisky center. A conference of eastern whisky men who met here today announced they are formulating plans to buy up all available Bourbon whisky and concentrate it in a distillery here for investment purposes.

The syndicate, known as the Distillers' Consolidated company, incorporated under the laws of Maryland, announced today the purchase of 10,805 cases and 4,297 barrels of "old 70" whisky.

Scotlan Porter, New York banker, who was created trustee in bankruptcy for the United States Food Products company and the Kentucky Distilleries and Warehouse company, is president of the Consolidated company.

SMALL FORTUNE FOUND ON BODY OF RECLUSE

New York, April 9.—(AP)—When Tillie Johnson, an aged Brooklyn recluse, was buried today, her funeral expenses were paid from $5,000 in paper money found sewed like a lining onto her clothing.

Woman's Club Fashion Show Brings Out Smartest Modes

Summer's smartest modes were shown at the Atlanta Woman's Club Friday afternoon when one of the most complete and magnificent displays of fashions ever seen in Atlanta was staged.

The models were furnished by Chamberlin-Johnson-Dunose company and were the very latest creations in evening dress, afternoon gowns, street wear, riding habits, sport costumes, bathing suits and negligees.

Mrs. T. G. Delph, chairman of the fashion displays for the club, and under whose direction the display was made, with her co-workers, showed splendid judgment in selecting 16 of the loveliest girls of the sub-city in Atlanta, to pose as mannequins.

Beginning with the chic sport suits, each manner of dress was especially attractive, ending with the exquisitely-gowned bride with her bridesmaids and flower girls.

While the Tech Ramblers orchestra, under the direction of Walter Sharp, displayed appropriate music each mannequin appeared in different apparel, wearing hat and shoes to correspond with each costume.

All Beautiful.

When asked what her favorite costume was, Mrs. Delph, president of the Woman's club, replied tactfully: "I cannot decide, they are all so beautiful and the grace and beauty of the girls is so striking, that the south can easily boast of the most beautiful womanhood of the nation."

Mrs. D. F. Stevenson was especially impressed with the loveliness of the peach-blossom taffeta afternoon gown worn by Miss Ida Thomas, and exclaimed that she had never seen Ida more charming.

Mrs. Emmett A. Jones, when asked her greatest impression, replied, "Mary Moseley was wonderful in the dark blue georgette afternoon frock carrying the orchid parasol."

Mrs. Hamilton Douglas was sure that nothing could be more beautiful and artistic than the evening gown worn by Miss Virginia Turman, which was of pale pink flat crepe, with inlets of lace butterflies.

Mrs. Irving S. Thomas was enthusiastic in her praises of the blue taffeta coat, which concealed a lovely gown of heavy white satin with inlets of princess lace and beaded with pearls, as worn by Miss Jane Sharp.

Miss Cordelia Orme was given an ovation as she appeared in an exquisite bridal array, which was fashioned of white satin, embroidered in seed pearls, with the new skirt lengths and dress shower of lilies of the valley and orchids. The bride's veil was of Venetian lace over tulle, and caught at the forehead with a band of rhinestones, she wore a necklace of rhinestones and white satin slippers with handsome rhinestone buckles.

Miss Helen Noble and Miss Mary Moseley, as bridesmaids, wore lovely gowns of pink and canary georgette. Little Misses Laura Peeples and Dorothy High Petet were lovely as flower girls.

Miss Ida Nevin was charming in a rose colored spring coat, which concealed a white georgette with the only trimming a lovely rhinestone ornament at the waistline, which circled the entire figure.

Others who were charming in the different models were: Miss Pat Rogers, Miss Frances Barnett, Miss Evelyn Sims, Miss Margaret Andes, Miss Isabella Spring, Miss Willene Car-

REGENSTEIN'S

INSTALLMENT XLII.

A RESUME FOR CELIA.

Donovan's hand jerked itself away, then came back and rested on Celia's glossy head that shone with her hair's brushing of it. "Fond ain't a word I'm fond of," said she, and her unused smile flickered. "But I wish you well and not harm, and that's more than I wish most people."

Her hand stroked the shining head gently, once or twice. "I don't wish you should take harm from man or woman—specially from man."

Celia felt that the glass gray eyes were fixed piercingly upon her, but she wouldn't look up. "Thank you, nurse," she murmured, "thank you . . . dear nurse."

Donovan's hand came back and gave another stroke or two, then her fingers, rough from sewing, caught in the living silk. "There now! I've done what I never did before," she exclaimed in vexation. "I've pulled your hair."

"I liked it," smiled Celia. "Do it again, won't you?"

"No," replied Donovan. "You can't learn old dogs new tricks, and I'm not naturally a petter. But I'll say this much . . ."

She paused so long that Celia prompted her with, "Well, nurse?"

"I'll say this before I leave you to rest, which is what you had ought to do . . . I'll say that this bad world would seem a heap sadder to me than what it seems now, if any badness should harm you."

"I don't think it will, nurse."

"Don't think it is a bad thing, too. We've all got to take some trouble to be sure and not let badness harm us . . . our own badness first of all, maybe. What I say is, if we don't take trouble, trouble will take us."

"That's very good, nurse. Where did you get it?"

"Out of my own head," replied Donovan with gratified pride. "It's queer how much you can get out of your own head if you only ruminate about it in it enough. Now you remember, Miss . . . if you don't take trouble, trouble will take you."

"What sort of trouble must I take?"

"The trouble to find out whether you are right or wrong before you go and do some foolishness . . . like you did when you went and swam for them Jews at the theater in next to nothing," was the stern reply.

And Donovan, not staying for an answer, left the room with a last hostile glance at the orchids as she closed the door.

Celia found when she was left alone that she couldn't think of Padraic or anything else with clearness. It seemed to her exactly as if her mind was a pane of glass to close to her, that kept getting blurred with her own breath, every time she tried to look through it.

She would see something distinctly—then a blur—then another detached bit, then another blur. And try as she might, she couldn't think consecutively. No sooner did one thing come to her than it drifted off into something else.

The pleasant lassitude that Donovan's long combing and brushing of her hair had given to her whole body, extended to her mind, too. But then it was more than lassitude. . . . she felt weak, incapable of stirring. She wanted very much to see whether Padraic had written anything on the card inclosed in its small envelope, but though the orchids were only a few feet away, she couldn't bring herself to make the effort of rising and going over to them in order to get it. Perhaps she had fainted after all. . . . Who had told her that? Never mind. . . . Having never been ill she couldn't tell, but she did feel unnatural, though in a way the feeling was also pleasant. . . . It was as if her body and mind said to her:

"You cannot make an effort, so there's no use trying. . . . Well, she wouldn't try."

After all, the three days didn't begin until tomorrow. If she had just kept quiet and rested as Donovan had told her to she would be quite strong again by tomorrow and everything would be clearer. . . .

She lay in a kind of dim, agreeable trance, gazing at the orchids, and trying to imagine what Padraic had written on the card. . . . Orchids. . . . He had sent them to her of course because he had said often that she was like an orchid. . . . How beautiful it would be to see them growing wild in their native forests. . . . high among dark, tropic foliage. . . . The Amazon river. . . . Wasn't it the Amazon where they grew most wonderfully?

And she imagined mysterious reaches of dim, shadowy water, like the water in dreams. . . . towering walls of foliage inclosed them. . . . She was with Padraic in a small boat gliding under the heavy branches. . . . high, high overhead were the orchids. . . . clusters, garlands. . . . festoons of them. . . . Ospreys, too. . . . There were ospreys in the forests of the Amazon. . . . Who had told her that? Never mind. . . . here—they came. . . . one, two, three. . . . a score of them. . . . hundreds and thousands. . . . melting among the orchids like puffs of snow. . . . More and yet more. . . . An enchanted snowstorm of white whirling birds.

If she decided to go with Padraic that was where he must take her. . . . to the Amazon.

The little boat glided with her into sleep.

When she awoke, it was quite late, for the window curtains had been drawn, and a lamp lighted on her writing table. The lamp was a tiny one and thickly shaded so as not to disturb her, but just as she awakened a log broke in two with a flurry of flame and sparks that illumined the whole room—or probably it was the very crash of the log that roused her. . . . drowsily at the dancing skeins of light and shadow, then opened her eyes wide, and sat up in bed with a startled exclamation. Either some fantastic dream still lingered, or her room had become enchanted. . . . The orchids were gone, but on every side spread flowering boughs of dogwood, pink and white—a very grove of dogwood. They framed the fire, made lovely patterns against the blue tapestry above it, fretted the oak paneling of the walls, with their pale, gleaming blossoms. . . . Leaned even against the posts of her bed. Some petals had fallen upon the coverlet. She touched one softly to see if it were real. . . .

Donovan, very real, came in with a bowl of steaming broth and a bunch of Muscatel grapes on a tray.

"Nurse! Who sent these? Who arranged them? Where are my orchids?"

"Mr. Fraser brought them. . . . I fixed 'em the way he told me to, and then orchids are in the bathroom. Mr. Fraser says you are to take this broth."

"He brought them? How?"

"In his car. He went out in the country himself for 'em. Now take your broth."

Celia began to sip obediently. Then she laid aside the spoon. "Where is Mr. Fraser?"

"Out to dinner. He brought you these grapes, too."

Celia ate some more grapes thoughtfully, then put down the bunch and lay back on her pillow.

"Ain't you going to eat 'em all?" asked Donovan.

"No, I couldn't possibly. Did Mr. Fraser leave any message?"

Donovan took a sealed envelope from her apron pocket.

"He left this," said she. "Will I turn on the light for you to read it by?"

"Please," said Celia.

Donovan turned on the reading lamp beside the bed, and went out with the tray.

The family's food is "food for thought"

"Keeping down the grocery bill" is a part of the housewife's job. "Keeping it paid" is a part of her husband's. The daily ordering of groceries is one of the tasks of every housewife—more important than others because the family MUST have food and because "groceries" make up one of the biggest items of expense in the average home.

HERE'S A PLAN YOU MAY HAVE OVERLOOKED—one that will REDUCE your grocery bills, save you money, and help you to get MORE for the money you spend. Thousands of other families are using this plan. Some of them, your friends and neighbors, have smaller bills than yours, and they don't skimp on anything, either. HOW?

Simply by reading the grocery ads in The Constitution they KNOW when, where and what to buy to get the biggest values for the least money.

CENTURY RUBBER WORKS
Lake Jones, Mgr.
Factory Branch
184 Spring St., Atlanta, Ga.

More than three hundred leading real estate dealers and prominent business men were guests Friday afternoon at an elaborate barbecue at Avondale lake in Avondale Estates as guests of G. F. Willis, owner of Atlanta's newest suburban city.
The barbecue was the second given to the real estate board in two years and offered the visitors opportunity to witness the remarkable progress made in building and general development in Avondale within twelve months time.
The tables were placed on the banks of the lake, which has just been completed, marking fulfillment of the final promise of Mr. Willis for recreational advantage in this new residence section. The lake is a half mile in circumference, and is circled by a roadway and also by a bridge path.
The "cue" was declared by all present one of the most enjoyable and complete ever given in Atlanta. There was plenty of everything for the guests—an unlimited supply of barbecued chicken, beef, pork, mutton, and other staples and beer to accompany the meats.
Mr. Willis presided and when the meal was over, he was introduced to the audience by President J. R. Smith, of the Atlanta real estate board, who paid him high praise as the builder of a splendid suburban city which one day will become a part of Atlanta, thereby adding to its fame as a "city of handsome homes." Mr. Willis, in a few fitting words, expressed his thanks and appreciation of the attendance of so many of the city's best known men.
The barbecue gave opportunity to many realtors to inspect the five "Homes Beautiful," which played so important a part in The Constitution's exhibit last week. Mr. Willis is keeping them open for two weeks longer in recognition of their great drawing power and the fact that so many people have expressed the desire to inspect them again. The many advantages of Avondale as a home center were pointed out to the visitors before and after the barbecue was served by residents of Avondale and others interested in the section.
